PUBLISHERS' NOTE

This volume makes no attempt to trace all the Dabys, Darbys, and Derbys in America. It is limited to the descendants of Thomas Derby, of Stow, Massachusetts. The genealogy of another Derby stock has been compiled by Professor Samuel C. Derby, of Columbus, Ohio, but has never been printed. His manuscript, we believe, has been deposited in the Boston Public Library, where it may, no doubt, be consulted by those who do not find their names or those of their ancestors in the present volume. But there were still other Derbys established in America at an early date, some of whom are referred to in the Introduction, which, however, makes no attempt to be exhaustive.

The arrangement adopted in this book is simple. An individual number is given to every descendant of Thomas Derby mentioned in the book, the treatment of persons who died unmarried or in infancy not differing in this respect from that of heads of families whose descendants are traced further. This is logical and scientific, permitting further references to any persons mentioned in the work by these numbers. It permits future critics simply to say, for example, that "55, Derby Genealogy, unaccounted for; married and died at such and such a time, and had this and that child," or that "100, Derby Genealogy, did not die young, as has been supposed."

In certain systems such numbers are given only to those whose descendants are traced further, and are thus family and not really individual numbers. In the present work, children who become heads of families, which are noticed further on, are distinguished by the words "See Family —, page —," while each family in turn appears under the caption, "Family —, see page —."

The page references are for the sake of the many who complain of difficulty in tracing out their lineages in numbered genealogies, in spite of the supposed scientific character of current standard systems and their undoubted simplicity to the initiated. In the present book the name of every child whose descendants are traced further is followed by the number of his own family and of the page of the book on which it appears, while the caption above each family is a reference back from the head of that family to the page where he or she appears as a child in his or her parents' family. Those who find difficulty with current systems need, in the present case, only to look up in the Index the page on which appears their own name, or that of parent or grandparent, as the case may be, from which point the lineage is easily traced both up and down by means of the family numbers and page references.

This system has been adopted at the suggestion of The Genealogical Department of The Grafton Press, which has also devised the Owner's Lineage at the end of the book. By means of this arrangement the owner of any copy of this book need trace out his ancestral line but once, writing the name of each ancestor in the proper space, with the ancestor's individual number, and the pages of the volume where the ancestor's name appears. Every feature of his personal lineage is thereafter indexed for convenient reference.

INTRODUCTION

The antecedents in England of Thomas Derby, of Stow, Massachusetts, have never been ascertained. An ancient Lincolnshire family of Darby or Derby bore arms, argent, a chevron between three garbs, sable.

The first notice of the Darby family which we have met with, says Thompson, in his History and Antiquities of Boston, England, is in a pedigree of the Tamworth family, where it is stated that Nicholas Tamworth, of Tamworth, married Jane, the daughter of — Darby, of Leverton. This was about the year 1200. Ralph de Darby, of Bennington, occurs in 1346, Thomas in 1346 and 1353, and Robert in 1357. Roger Darby, of Leverton, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Strange. Their son Ralph married Alice, daughter of John Read, of Wrangle. This Ralph Darby is mentioned by Dugdale as residing at Leake in 1517. His son, Thomas Darby, of Bennington, is mentioned in 1536, 1539, 1540 and 1544. Alicia, or Alice, his wife, daughter of John Langton, is mentioned in 1547. William, son of Thomas and Alice, was alive in 1571. His son, William Darby, was living about 1620. We find mention of Thomas Darby, of Leake, in 1597, 1602 and 1642. He died in 1659.

A Thomas Darby, of Leverton, occurs also in 1642.

There are several memorials of the Darby and Gilbert families in the floor of the chancel of the church at Leake.

At a short distance from the Moat House is a large ancient building called Darby Hall, which was the residence of the family of that name who were considerable proprietors in this and the adjoining parishes for several centuries, and allied by marriage to the Dymocke family.

Darby Hall is partly in Leake and partly in Leverton. It is now the property of the heirs of Oldfield. We do not know whether the chief branch of the Derby or Darby family resided at Bennington or at the house above mentioned, standing partly in Leake.

Ralph Darby resided in Leake in 1517, William Derby in 1571, and Thomas Derby in 1797. Another Thomas Derby died at Leake in 1659. Dymoke Darby died at Leake in 1701.

So far Thompson. Some Darbys or Derbys settled in New England at an early date. The Company of New England, says J. B. Felt in his Annals of Salem (1845, page 110; and vol. ii., 1849, page 526), consisting of many worthy gentlemen in the City of London, Dorchester, and other places, aiming at the glory of God, the propagation of the Gospel of Christ, the conversion of the Indians, and the enlargement of the King's dominions in America, and being authorized by His Royal letters patent for that end, at their very great costs and charges, furnished five ships to go to New England for the further settling of the English plantation that they had already begun there. To human perception, all was dark concerning the political career of this commonwealth when William Darby, of Dorchester, England, petitioned the Council for New England, February 18, 1623, that Richard Bushrode, of the same town, and his associates might begin a plantation at Cape Ann, which led to the settlement of Naumkeag, now Salem.

The original manuscripts of T. L. Winthrop, given in the Collections of the American Antiquarian Society, vol. iii., cxxxv., under the "Origin of the Company of Massachusetts Bay that came with Winthrop," contain the "Representatives to General Court in England, held at Deputyse House," October 12, 1629, as follows:

William Darby,
John Smith,
George Philips,
Simon Whitcomb,
John Davenport,
Thomas Andrews,
Theophilus Eaton,
John Endicott.

The will of Roger Harlakenden, County of Essex, England, names as one to settle his estate, Henrye Darby, "now of Newton, in the Massachusetts Bay of America."

Savage refers to John Derby, of Plymouth, Massachusetts in 1637, son of Christopher, from the west part of Dorsetshire, England. He removed to Yarmouth before 1643, when John Derbe, Yarmouth, appears among those able to bear arms, and was dead in February, 1652. The inventory of his estate is dated February 22, 1656. He had a son, born the last day of February, 1648, whose name is lost from the record, and a son, Matthew, born February 8, 1650. Matthew was subsequently of Barnstable, and, according to the statement of one Joseph Lumbert, made to one Simon Bringley in the street, in July, 1671, Matthew Darby, of Barnstable, was to receive all of the property of one John Turner if the latter failed to return from sea. Sarah Darby, of Barnstable, who married Jabez Lombard, December 1, 1660, was probably a sister of Matthew.

Richard Derby, of Plymouth, 1637, called "gentleman," was a brother of John, of Plymouth, 1637, and thus another son of Christopher. Richard Derby sold twenty acres of land to Edward Doty in September, 1639. (Plymouth Colony Records, vol. xii., page 38). This Christopher and his son John were undoubtedly referred to in the will of "John Chipman, now of Barnstable, in the Government of New Plymouth in New England in America, being ye only son and heir of Mr. Thomas Chipman, late deceased at Brinspittle, about five miles from Dorechester in Dorsetshire in England," in which document he refers to "his kinsman Mr. Christopher Derby" and the latter's "son, John Derbe."

These Derbys are probably to be identified with the family of that name, of Asherswell, now called Stirthill, in Dorsetshire, England, mentioned in Hutchin's History of Dorsetshire, as the Derbys of Asherswell, lessees of property which was once a manor and hamlet. A Christopher Derby was buried at Asherswell in 1603, while Thomas Derby, son of another Christopher, was baptized at Stirthill, or Asherswell, in 1616. Reference is also found to Christopher Derby, gentleman, of Dorchester, in Dorsetshire, England, who flourished at a period which would suit the identification of him with the Christopher, father of John and Richard, of Plymouth, Massachusetts.

Agnes Derby, relict of Augustine Derby, of Bisley, in the County of Surrey, England, made a nuncupative will May 20, 1650, proved June 1, 1650, in which she bequeathed a sum in trust to Henry Collier, of Horsabell, yeoman, "He to pay Edward Derby, in New England, ten pounds when he shall come and demand the same."

This Edward Derby was of Braintree, Mass., and may be identical with the Edward Darby who, according to the Boston Records, was married to Susanna Hook, January 25, 1659, by Richard Bellingham, Deputy Governor. The latter settled in Weymouth, Massachusetts, where, according to the Weymouth Records, he had a daughter Mary, born December 29, 1660, and Priscilla, born June 20, 1672. Probably he was the father of Edward Derby who married first, in Weymouth, about 1687, Ruth, daughter of Simon Whitmarsh, by whom he had a son, Edward S. Derby, born in Weymouth, May 18, 1688; and who married, secondly, in 1705, Rebecca (Sumner) Hobart, of Hingham, Mass., who was born at Lancaster, the daughter of Roger and Mary Josselyn Sumner, of Milton.

Joseph and Thomas Daby, Darby or Derby, who removed from Concord to Stow, are supposed to have been brothers, but documentary proof of such a relationship has not been found. Nor is it known whether they or either of them belong to the Derby family of Plymouth, that of Braintree, or that of Weymouth, Mass., or whether they were immigrants, born in England.

Of these two, Cornet Joseph Daby married at Sudbury, Mass., January 14, 1676-77, Jane Plympton, daughter of Thomas and Abigail (Noyes) Plympton. She was born August 18, 1655, and died at Stow, Mass., March 7, 1728. Joseph Daby married, secondly, Elizabeth (Flagg) Clark in Concord, about 1731. She was a daughter of Eleazer Flagg and Debora Barnes, and married, first, Benjamin Clark and, secondly, Joseph Daby. She died October 21, 1784, aged 93 years.

The pages which follow are devoted to Thomas Derby and his descendants.

Acknowledgment is here made of a special indebtedness to Miss Mary L. Derby, daughter of Benjamin Derby of Leominster, Massachusetts, for her valuable assistance in connection with this work; and to her and to the many others who have furnished information the compiler expresses her thanks.

John Daby was one of the original petitioners for the creation of the town of Harvard in 1731. His estate was partly within the old Lancaster bounds. He bought of John Willard, October 27, 1718, lands lying upon both sides of the brook at the northern end of Pine Hill, extending along the Lancaster and Stow Line. He was a blacksmith, and his son, Joseph, a joiner. Together they built a saw and grist mill or mills upon the stream at the western foot of Pine Hill about the date of Harvard's incorporation. Joseph Daby is mentioned as proprietor of a gristmill in 1748. He sold both cornmill and sawmill to Jonathan Symonds in 1751. John Daby's sawmill is mentioned in the records as early as 1733, when he provided a part of the material for the meeting-house. From the first he held a prominent place in town, his pew in church being the third in dignity. The site of his first home is not definitely known, but appears to have been in Stow Leg, near the Lancaster line. John Daby was Corporal in 1757 (Nourse: History of Harvard). The following items appear in the records: "Feb. ye 3rd, 1723-4, John Darby for Som allowance for a hiway Taken Through ye Land he purchased of John Willard.
